

Unto His Imperial Majesty, Alastair, Emperor of the South and all its (important) domains
From Randall, called the Purified, Ruler of Cese Mai under the Light

We have discovered that during the war (dare I call it that) certain targets were eliminated with greater prejudice than others. Graveyards were often targeted, the priests of the Temple of Death nearly wiped out, and also Paranswarmian monasteries (the Glor'diadelian ones were protected within the walls of the city).

In the process of investigating these situations, we have come across five men who had given themselves over to the enemy... to the Queen Empress of Hanal and her lackeys... in some way that allowed them to embody some sort of power that neither I nor my priests and magis had seen prior.

Unsure what to do with them, we have decided to rely upon your Imperial Majesty. They are shrouded and caged and with them we have sent a wagon load of their personal goods.

We are in hopes that your greater resources will enable you to determine exactly what they were aiming for, what their plan was. One of them was taken in by a Rakasta Lord who was not gentle in attempting to get the question answered, but nevertheless, got nowhere.

I remain respectfully yours,

Randall of Cese Mai
