Greetings Archduke Alastair,

After considerable discussion between ourselves, the Awful General Lord Enderiul Mori'quendi'rim and I, General Elrohir of the Singing Leaves have determined that it is appropriate that we partition our patrols over Hanal as we seek to destroy any of the unspeakable who may manifest there - without becoming embroiled in the human war.

Unpartitioned it is too dangerous, as eventually our ships will come to battle. We have determined fair lines, BUT had to decide on an arbiter. At the suggestion of My Queen and General Mori'quendi'rim's cousin, Princess Curin'irim, we determined that you were the only human on this continent who held respect from both sides.

Therefore, we have included our lines of partition on the memory crystal that accompanies this document.

We wish to... together.... well... in unison anyway, ask you to agree to act as arbiter for any disputes that arise.

Such an agreement will allow us to continue to seek out the abomination of the ancients without risking war between ourselves.

With respect,

Elrohir
